

Background

China Charity Fair (CCF) 2015 will be held in Shenzhen Special Economic Zone on September 18-20, 2015. CCF, a leading magnificent charity event annually held in mainland China, is famous for highest level, largest scale and most profound global influence. It is committed to leveraging charitable resources, establishing an exchange platform and promoting charity awareness. The operation mode and core values of the CCF 2015 have been improved. Specifically, the advisory committee consisting of charity experts, academics and enthusiasts has proposed discussion topics which are based on charity development trends and policy priorities in the year 2015. CCF 2015 will spread cutting-edge ideas and innovative modes, exert impact on China's charitable causes and even direct international charity development.

Objective

Focusing on development trends and pressing challenges, the conference part of CCF 2015 will discuss about development path for China charity causes and make contributions to policy decision-making. It will also establish an international dialogue platform for domestic and foreign charitable organizations, government officials, experts and scholars, business leaders and media.

Theme

Poverty Relief and Boundless Love of China

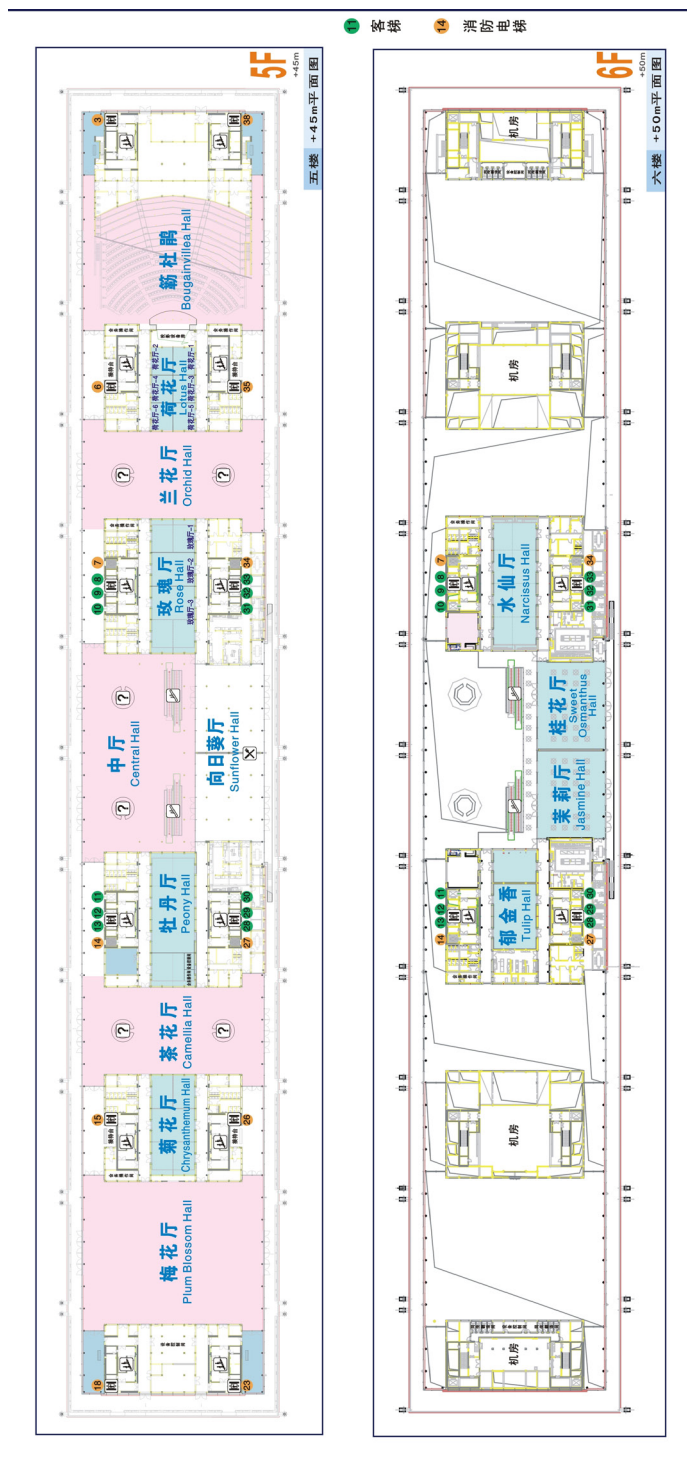

Highlights

The 14 topics proposed by the advisory committee fall into four categories, namely "Internet + charity", "charity makers", "charity internationalization", and "charity innovation". The former two topics profoundly echo with "Internet Plus" initiative and "mass entrepreneurship and mass innovation" policy, and the cross-border cooperation between Internet and charity is to motivate the young entrepreneurs' enthusiasm about charity. As for the latter two topics, many domestic and international charities will gather and show the development of China's public welfare undertakings and introduce advanced experience of foreign charity causes, in order to promote the internationalization, capacity building and innovative development of China's charity causes. CCF 2015 is highly internationalized with 60 international charity people from U.S., UK, Japan, Singapore, South Korea, India and Myanmar present. CCF 2015 serves as a high-end exchange platform where pragmatic discussions are to be held to depict the development blueprint for China's charity causes.

People born in 1980s and 1990s have grown up with the Internet, they are reckoned as the aborigines of the Internet. Recently, more and more young people have followed the “Internet + Charity” surge -they established their own IT companies, which have impressed the world. After the keynote speech made by the experts, we will invite some “Internet + Philanthropy” enterprisers to have a conversation.

17:40-18:00 Certification to the Outstanding ‘Internet+ Charity’ Young Enterprisers

Think Big Initiative project was jointly sponsored by Chengmei charity found and Younthink Center in 2013. The project adhere to the idea that “human is our first investment”, which aims to support young Changemakers and to provide angel investment to the charity program organized by them. In 2015, ‘Internet + Charity’ will become the focus of the program. During this charity fair, the most outstanding young ‘Internet + Charity’ enterprisers will obtain certificates issued by the honored guests for the sake of encouraging them to make more changes to the ‘Internet + Charity’.

14:00-15:30 A. How Can Governments Work with the Social Sector for Greater Social Impact?

Key Message: China's social investment is still at a nascent stage of development, it is vital to consolidate foundation for its further development. Successful models from the world have demonstrated that where the government and social sector work collaboratively together for innovative solutions, greater social impact is created. This panel will discuss some of these models, for instance Social Impact Bonds, which is a great example for pay-for-success models with collaboration from private funders, social investors and social organisations; to funding models that support intermediaries and the building up of the ecosystem.
